COMPREHENSION OF SENTENCES

It denotes the mental processes by which listeners take in the sounds uttered by a speaker use them to construct as interpretation of what they think the speaker intended to convey.

More simply, it is the building of meanings from sounds.

SURFACE CONSTITUENTS

In the four steps of the construction process (a) feel constituents to be conceptually unified wholes, (b) use them in the organization of speech, (c) store them in working memory as units, and (d) purge them from memory when a sentence has ended.

SYNTACTIC APPROACHES TO THE CONSTRUCTION PROCESS :

In the syntactic approach listeners are assumed to use the surface features of a sentence in coming to its interpretation

Syntactic strategies: used in identifying constituents (i.e., knowledge of syntax)

SYNTACTIC APPROACHES TO THE CONSTRUCTION PROCESS :

This work is based on several general principles, and other have proposed tentative strategies.

Semantic strategies: knowledge of the world/situation
& reasoning power
